

Bodleian Library
Broad Street, Oxfordshire, OX1 3BG

Described by Sir Nikolaus Pevsner in the Buildings of England: Oxfordshire as an area which is "unique in the world", the Bodleian Library is situated at the heart of the historic University of Oxford in a remarkable group of buildings spanning over 500 years of history.

It is one of the five national copyright libraries; the principal library for Oxford University and an international resource for scholarship and research worldwide.

Being the second largest library in the U.K. today (after the British Library), the Bodleian has 30 reading rooms - with 2,482 places, in ten buildings in central Oxford. With annual acquisitions of over 300,000 items (including foreign purchases), there are over a staggering 7.5 million volumes held by the Library on over 190km (118 miles) of shelving.

We welcome the opportunity to host your event for all types of corporate and private occasions including product launches, parties and wedding receptions.

The medieval Divinity School, the oldest teaching room of the University built 1488, is a masterpiece of English Gothic architecture.
