

Natural History Museum
Cromwell Road, London, SW7 5BD

The Natural History Museum is one of the UK's most iconic and versatile venues, inspiring the most compelling events in London. With four unique spaces available for meetings, drinks receptions, gala dinners and concerts, the Museum can cater for anything from two to 1200.

For a truly jaw-dropping event, the Museum's Central Hall is unrivalled. One of the largest and most versatile party spaces in London, the Central Hall with its huge Diplodocus centre piece and soaring arches can cater for up to 700 dinner guests and 1200 reception. Designed by Alfred Waterhouse as a "Cathedral to God's Creatures", this stunning example of the finest Victorian architecture opened to the public in 1881. With its beautiful 60 foot high panelled ceiling, intricately carved terracotta and sweeping stone staircase it offers an unrivalled setting for both corporate and private events.

Equally impressive is the Museum's Earth Hall, with its own private entrance the futuristic space is perfect for cocktail receptions and seated dinners. The atrium of this spectacular, modern gallery features slate walls etched with the solar system, giant statues representing Earth's past, present and future and a huge globe through which guests move on an escalator to take a symbolic journey through the centre of the earth.

In October 2009 the Natural History Museum has open an additional meeting and events space to its offering in the form of the Darwin Centre. This significant £78 million development has created an eight storey cocoon-like structure with an additional 16,000 square metres of floor space. Home to our scientists as well as a vast collection of plant, insect and animal specimens, the Darwin Centre will offer you the chance to take a peek into the world of cutting-edge natural science research. The beautiful landscape garden is the perfect venue for any reception in the summer.

The Museum also boasts the Flett Theatre, an auditorium for lectures and presentations for up to 209 with all the Audio Visual equipment needed for any event.
